TALLANDIER, 2003. Couverture rigide. Book Condition: Neuf. Dust Jacket Condition: Neuf. 7 mai 1954. Après cinquante-sept jours de combats acharnés, les forces françaises du camp retranché de Diên-Biên-Phu capitulent. Cette défaite, par le traumatisme quelle provoqua, précipita le retrait des Français englués dans le conflit indochinois depuis sept années. Longtemps, lopinion publique française avait fait preuve dune relative indifférence à la situation de ses troupes en Asie du Sud-Est, puisque cette guerre était avant tout une affaire de soldats professionnels, de légionnaires et de parachutistes. Si les premiers temps semblèrent donner lavantage aux Français, la création de la République populaire de Chine en 1949 et son aide conséquente apportée au Vietminh rendirent les opérations sur le terrain de plus en plus délicates. Létat-major prit donc la décision de forcer le Viet-minh à un affrontement direct. Pour cela, 11 000 soldats français sinstallèrent dans la cuvette de Diên-Biên- Phu, les militaires estimant que de la sorte, une attaque de lennemi serait immédiatement repérée et contrecarrée. Cétait sans compter sur la ténacité du Viet-minh, qui, sous la direction du général Giap et avec laide de 75 000 coolies, concentra autour de Diên-Biên Phu 35 000 hommes et de nombreuses pièces dartillerie, soumettant la garnison à un feu ininterrompu et empêchant tout ravitaillement efficace. Revivez dans cet album les heures sombres de cette bataille coloniale perdue davance, à travers les témoignages danciens combattants : les bombardements ininterrompus, lennemi insaisissable qui frappe par surprise, les combats au corps à corps pour tenir des positions intenables, les parachutages désespérés qui nont jamais permis de rétablir la situation ----- Détails sur le produit Relié: 144 pages Editeur: Tallandier (7 novembre 2003) Langue: Français ISBN-10: 2847341188 ISBN-13: 978-2847341188.
